

Resident (non-migratory) cutthroat trout are present in most small tributary streams to Smith River and the mainstem, South, and North Umpqua Rivers. Fluvial (migrating within rivers) cutthroat trout are potentially present throughout the entire mainstem North Umpqua River from the mouth to Soda Springs Dam during the entire year. Fluvial cutthroat trout are also present in Smith River and some of the larger tributaries. In the mainstem South Umpqua River, fluvial cutthroat trout are potentially present above Jackson Creek year round. Due to warm water, fluvial fish are believed to be present below Jackson Creek and downstream throughout the mainstem Umpqua River only during late fall through early summer (November-June). Fresh run, adult, searun cutthroat trout first enter the mainstem Umpqua River in June and July and proceed upstream into cooler tributary streams. Kelts (fish that have spawned) drop out of spawning tributaries and head back to the estuary/ocean during February through May. Smolts (juveniles) migrate downstream through the Smith, North, South, and mainstem Umpqua Rivers during the period March through May.

ESA-listed cutthroat trout could be exposed to various fisheries in the Umpqua River Basin. The actual probability of incidental take varies among the fisheries. Those species that may be present and fished for in the Umpqua River Basin include spring chinook salmon, fall chinook salmon, coho salmon, summer and winter steelhead trout, hatchery rainbow trout, smallmouth bass, striped bass, shad, and white and green sturgeon.

ODFW included a conservation plan in their permit application that includes measures designed to minimize the incidental take of ESA-listed cutthroat trout. One such measure is the termination of hatchery rainbow trout releases in areas of the North and South Umpqua Rivers and, beginning in 1997, closing all remaining trout angling in the Umpqua River Basin, except the North Umpqua River above Soda Springs Dam where cutthroat trout do not occur. Other conservation measures include closing spawning habitat to fishing, maintaining beneficial time and area closures, periodic monitoring and evaluation programs, regulation enforcement, scientific research, recovery planning, and public education.

Those individuals requesting a hearing (see ADDRESSES) should set out the specific reasons why a hearing on this application would be appropriate. The holding of such hearing is at the discretion of the Assistant Administrator for Fisheries, NOAA. All statements and opinions contained in this application summary are those of the applicant and do not necessarily reflect the views of NMFS.

Phase 1 of the evaluation, for which clearance is being sought, is a descriptive study of all adult ESL providers in these states and selected sites providing adult ESL instruction. The information from the study will be used to develop descriptive profiles of the key features of adult ESL instruction, to help identify sites for Phase 2 of the study, and to obtain respondents' perception about "what works" for low-literate, adult ESL learners. Information will be collected from ESL administrators and instructors.
