

reasonable testing program to support certificates of compliance with a consumer product safety standard. Section 14(b) of the CPSA allows firms which are required to issue certificates of compliance to use an independent third-party organization to conduct the testing required to support the certificate of compliance.

Section 16(b) of the CPSA (15 U.S.C. 2065(b)) authorizes the Commission to issue rules to require establishment and maintenance of records necessary to implement the CPSA or determine compliance with rules issued under the authority of the CPSA. On December 22, 1992, the Commission issued rules prescribing requirements for a reasonable testing program to support certificates of compliance with the Safety Standard for Automatic Residential Garage Door Operators (57 FR 60449). These regulations also require manufacturers, importers, and private labelers of residential garage door operators to establish and maintain records to demonstrate compliance with the requirements for testing to support certification of compliance. 16 CFR Part 1211, Subparts B and C.

The Commission uses the information compiled and maintained by manufacturers and importers of residential garage door operators to protect consumers from risks of death and injury resulting from entrapment accidents associated with garage door operators. More specifically, the Commission uses this information to determine whether the products produced and imported by those firms comply with the standard. The Commission also uses this information to facilitate corrective action if any residential garage door operators fail to comply with the standard in a manner that creates a substantial risk of injury to the public.

B. Estimated Burden

The Commission staff estimates that about 14 firms are subject to the testing and recordkeeping requirements of the certification regulations. Information available to the Commission staff indicates that all of these firms use the services of an independent third-party organization to conduct the testing and maintain the records necessary to satisfy the requirements of the certification regulations.

The Commission staff estimates that after an initial one-time test to establish that a garage door operator complies with the requirements of the standard, the annual cost to a manufacturer or importer of garage door operators for the inspection and certification services of a third-party organization is approximately $1,200 per year. Thus, the total annual burden imposed by the certification regulations on all manufacturers and importers of garage door operators is about $16,800.

During a typical year, the Commission will expend approximately one week of professional staff time reviewing records required to be maintained by the certification regulations for residential garage door operators. The annual cost to the Federal government of the collection of information in these regulations is estimated to be $1,400.

C. Request for Comments

The Commission solicits written comments from all interested persons about the proposed request for approval of the collection of information in the certification and recordkeeping regulations for residential garage door operators. The Commission specifically solicits information about the hourly burden and monetary costs imposed by the collection of information on firms subject to this collection of information. The Commission also seeks information relevant to the following topics:

- Whether the collection of information is necessary for the proper performance of the Commission's functions;
- Whether the information will have practical utility for the Commission;
- Whether the quality, utility, and clarity of the information to be collected could be enhanced; and
- Whether the burden imposed by the collection of information could be minimized by use of automated, electronic or other technological collection techniques, or other form of information technology.
