Proposed Project

1. State-Based Evaluation of Trends and Risk Factors in Morbidity and Mortality from Sickle Cell Disease After Newborn Screening—New—Children with sickle cell disease are at increased risk for mortality and morbidity, especially in the first three years of life. The need for early diagnosis and preventive medical intervention is the rationale for newborn hemoglobinopathy screening programs, now operating in more than 40 states. Although clinical trials have clearly demonstrated the efficacy of early medical intervention, more information is needed regarding the actual utilization of available therapies and preventive measures in large populations, health statuses of children identified by newborn screening programs, and risk factors for adverse health outcomes. Potential risk factors include extent of medical care follow-up, location of treatment, the use of penicillin prophylaxis, immunization patterns, as well as parental social, demographic and educational factors. In FY 1995, CDC awarded $150,000 to three state health departments to assist in their efforts to ascertain health status and risk factors for young children with sickle cell disease. States will be using these funds to obtain information about individual children through structured questionnaires directed toward their parents and physicians. The total annual burden hours are 840.

Respondents	No. of respondents	No. of responses/respondent	Avg. burden/response (in hrs.)	Total burden (in hrs.)
Parents .....	840	1	.5	420
