

involvement on the development of its information collection requirements prior to obtaining approval with the Office of Management and Budget (OMB).

On October 1, 1995, the Paperwork Reduction Act (44 U.S.C. Chapter 35) went into effect and expanded the provisions of the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1980. Among the additional agency responsibilities enumerated in the Act were the requirements to plan for the development of new collections of information and the extension of existing collections of information far in advance of sending them forward to OMB for approval. This additional advanced planning is necessary because agencies must develop greater public participation in the development of information collection requirements imposed on the public. To achieve this public participation, the Commission must "provide 60-day notice in the Federal Register, and otherwise consult with members of the public and affected agencies" [44 U.S.C. 3506(c)(2)(A)]. In these notices, the Commission must solicit comments on the need for the information, its practical utility, the accuracy of the Commission's burden estimate, and on ways to minimize the burden, including through "the use of automated collection techniques or other forms of information technology."

In addition, the Act continued the requirement that agencies publish a notice in the Federal Register stating that the proposed collection of information has been submitted for OMB review. This is the second notice to appear in the Federal Register and provides the public with a second opportunity to comment. OMB must provide at least 30 days for public comment after receipt of the Commission's submission and prior to making a decision. In order for the Commission to obtain public comment and routine OMB review and approval, for both new collections of information and also to extend ongoing collections of information, it has to allow an additional 90 days in the approval process.

In order to properly account for any comments it receives in response to a Federal Register notice, it is necessary to establish a new docket prefix for notices concerning the Commission's collections of information. The new docket prefix will help the Commission to manage this type of work and assess its resources applicable to it. The new docket prefix will be ICFY-NNN-NNN, where the FY stands for the fiscal year in which the notice was issued, the first NNN is an identifier for the Commission's collection of information requirement and the second NNN represents either the first or second notice, with 000 to designate a 60 day notice and 001 to designate a 30-day notice. For example, IC98-592-000 would represent the 60-day notice for the Commission information collection FERC-592 during fiscal year 1998.

When an information collection requirement is also the subject of a proposed or final rule, the RM docket number would be used instead of an IC docket number.
