

in the determination of facts not previously considered; or

(3) If in the opinion of the Certifying Officer, a misinterpretation of facts or of the law justified reconsideration of the decision.

The TAA petition was filed on behalf of workers at Murray Engineering, Inc., Complete Design Service, Flint, Michigan engaged in activities related to industrial design and engineering services. The petition was denied because the petitioning workers did not produce an article within the meaning of section 222(3) of the Act.

The petitioner alleges that their services should be considered production because it involves a "tangible drawing essential and integral to the making or building of a product."

The engineering drawings and schematics prepared by subject firm workers services are not considered production within the meaning of section 222(3) of the Act.

The petitioner also asserts that the Department may be misled by the subject firm's name into thinking that there is not a tangible product involved, but states that subject firm workers produce "design product on paper."

Electronically generated information does not constitute production within the meaning of the Trade Act, and the fact that this information is generated on paper is irrelevant to worker group eligibility for trade adjustment assistance.

Finally, the petitioner appears to assert that the companies that produced the machines designed by the subject firm were certified and questions whether the Department has "discriminated" against the subject firm "because of a company name."

The subject firm does not produce the same product as its customers, nor do the subject firm workers produce a component that is integrated into further production by its customers. Thus, the issue of whether the subject firm's customers are certified or not is irrelevant in context with the petitioning worker group's eligibility for TAA. The design services produced by the subject firm do not constitute production within the meaning of section 222(3) of the Trade Act.

Only in very limited instances are service workers certified for TAA, namely the worker separations must be caused by a reduced demand for their services from a parent or controlling firm or subdivision whose workers produce an article and who are currently under certification for TAA.

In conclusion, the workers at the subject firm did not produce an article within the meaning of section 222(3) of the Trade Act 1974.

Conclusion

After review of the application and investigative findings, I conclude that there has been no error or misinterpretation of the law or of the facts which would justify reconsideration of the Department of Labor's prior decision. Accordingly, the application is denied.

Signed in Washington, DC, this 31st day of March, 2003.

Valeo Climate Control, USA-2 Division, Automotive Air Conditioning Condenser Line, Grand Prairie, TX; Valeo Climate Control, USA-2 Division, Aluminum Tubing Line, Grand Prairie, TX; Notice of Revised Determination on Reconsideration

By letter postmarked October 30, 2002, the company requested administrative reconsideration regarding the Department's Negative Determination Regarding Eligibility to Apply for Worker Adjustment Assistance, applicable to the workers of the subject firm.

The initial investigation resulted in a negative determination issued on September 27, 2002, based on the finding that imports of air conditioning condensers and aluminum tubing did not contribute importantly to worker separations at the Grand Prairie plant. The denial notice was published in the Federal Register on October 22, 2002 (67 FR 64922).

To support the request for reconsideration, the company supplied additional information to supplement that which was gathered during the initial investigation. Upon further review and contact with the company, it was revealed that the company began importing a significant portion of competitive condensers in the relevant period. Further, as established in the original investigation, a significant portion of tubing produced at the subject firm was integrated into the production of condensers.

Conclusion

After careful review of the additional facts obtained on reconsideration, I conclude that increased imports of articles like or directly competitive with those produced at Valeo Climate Control, USA-2 Division, Automotive Air Conditioning Condenser Line, and the Aluminum Tubing Line, Grand Prairie, Texas, contributed importantly to the declines in sales or production and to the total or partial separation of workers at the subject firm. In accordance with the provisions of the Act, I make the following certification:

All workers of Valeo Climate Control, USA-2 Division, Automotive Air Conditioning Condenser Line (TA-W-41,208), and the Aluminum Tubing Line (TA-W-41,208A), Grand Prairie, Texas, who became totally or partially separated from employment on or after March 1, 2001 through two years from the date of this certification, are eligible to apply for adjustment assistance under Section 223 of the Trade Act of 1974.

Signed in Washington, DC this 2nd day of April 2003.
