development for rare diseases, this draft guidance expands on the topic of natural history studies specifically.

There are approximately 7,000 recognized rare diseases. Individually, rare diseases affect a small number of people, but collectively rare diseases affect about 1 in 10 people in the United States. Most rare diseases have no approved therapies and thus present a significant unmet public health need. Although knowledge of a disease's natural history can benefit drug development for many disorders and conditions, natural history information is usually not available or is incomplete for most rare diseases; therefore, natural history information is particularly needed for these diseases.

This draft guidance describes the potential uses of a natural history study in all phases of drug development and in the postmarketing period, the strengths and weaknesses of various types of natural history studies that might be conducted to support drug development, data elements and research plans, and a practical framework for the conduct of a natural history study. The draft guidance also discusses patient confidentiality and data protection issues in natural history studies and the potential nature of interactions with FDA related to these studies.

This draft guidance is being issued consistent with FDA's good guidance practices regulation (21 CFR 10.115). The draft guidance, when finalized, will represent the current thinking of FDA on ''Rare Diseases: Natural History Studies for Drug Development.'' It does not establish any rights for any person and is not binding on FDA or the public. You can use an alternative approach if it satisfies the requirements of the applicable statutes and regulations. This guidance is not subject to Executive Order 12866.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: Interested persons are invited to send comments regarding this burden estimate or any other aspect of this collection of information, including any of the following subjects: (1) The necessity and utility of the proposed information collection for the proper performance of the agency's functions; (2) the accuracy of the estimated burden; (3) ways to enhance the quality, utility, and clarity of the information to be collected; and (4) the use of automated collection techniques or other forms of information technology to minimize the information collection burden.

Title of the Collection: Fertility Knowledge Survey.

Type of Collection: New.

Abstract: The Office of the Assistant Secretary for Health/Office of Population Affairs (OPA) is requesting a three-year approval by the Office of Management and Budget of a new information collection. We are seeking to collect information to increase understanding of (1) adolescent and young adult knowledge of human (female and male) fertility and (2) how this knowledge is related to behaviors and intentions involving childbearing. We propose to collect this information through a 20-minute web survey (Fertility Knowledge Survey) of 2,100 females and 1,900 males, aged 15 to 29 years, using an online panel that is based on a probability-based sample of the U.S. population. Respondents will be members of the general public, and consist of English-speaking females and males, aged 15 to 29 years, who are able to get pregnant or to biologically father a child, respectively. The survey will produce evidence and findings that are expected to be generalizable to the population of individuals in the United States with these characteristics.

Possessing accurate knowledge about human fertility is important information that enables reproductive-aged women and men to make informed decisions and plans about reproduction and empowers them to seek appropriate and timely health services (e.g., family planning, related preventive healthcare, or infertility assessment) to achieve those plans. OPA requires high-quality information on the fertility knowledge and related behaviors of U.S. adolescents and young adults to inform Title X policies and strategies that aim to close knowledge gaps, enhance reproductive life planning, and increase access to appropriate and evidence-informed care.

The web survey (Fertility Knowledge Survey) will be self-administered once by each respondent using a personal computer, tablet, or smart phone. A web survey has numerous methodological advantages, including increased accuracy in measurement of key variables of interest, and reduced burden on study participants. This collection will not involve small business or small entities.

The estimated annualized hour burden of responding to this information collection is 1,333 hours, or a weighted average of 20 minutes (.33 hours) per respondent. The hour-burden estimate includes the time spent by a respondent to read the email invitation, review the online consent or assent (minor), and complete the survey. Participation is voluntary and there are no costs to respondents other than their time.

ANNUALIZED BURDEN HOUR TABLE

Forms (if necessary)	Respondents (if necessary)	Number of respondents	Number of responses per respondents	Average burden per response	Total burden hours
Fertility Knowledge Survey	General Public, aged 15 to 29 years	4,000	1	20/60	1,333
